

INTERNATIONAL
JOURNAL
OF ORTHODOX THEOLOGY

Call for Papers

The International Journal of Orthodox Theology (IJOT – www.orthodox-theology.com) is the first ecumenical open-access journal that enables and advances the dialogue of contemporary Orthodox Theology from all over the world with Protestant and Catholic Theology. One of the most important aims of this journal is to support the ecumenical dialogue between Theologians and Theological Faculties worldwide. This journal is bilingual and encourages interdisciplinarity as well. The articles will be published either in English or in German. In 2011 we will dedicate two IJOT issues on the topic:

What is the human being? Main Aspects of Theological Anthropology

Both issues will unite systematic, biblical, ethical, philosophical, liturgical, patristical and historical approaches about the human being. New and original perspectives like the dialogue between Theology and Science or new discoveries in the area of Neuroscience, Psychology etc. are very welcome.

In the name of our international advisory board I would like to invite you very cordially to send us your article with a review and 5-7 keywords until June 30th, or October 31st 2011.

Please be so kind as to inform your colleagues and students about our international journal.

Best regards,
Daniel Munteanu

Editor in Chief of the International Journal of Orthodox Theology
